Max lives under a cloud - literally. Everywhere he goes the rain follows, so he never smiles and he has no friends. Who wants to talk to a bunny if it means getting wet? So Max is sad. Then he finds a solution; he makes a huge, multi-coloured rain hat. It is so big that it keeps him and all the other animals dry. Life becomes full and interesting, the cloud disappears, and Max is happy. The gentle, droll illustrations will be enjoyed even by very young children, but the full impact of the sophisticated theme - that the solution to happiness lies within oneself - will only be appreciated with more maturity.
