

Cock Crow: Poems about life in the countryside

Books Reviewed:

Cock Crow: Poems about life in the countryside [1]

Issue:

154 [2]

Reviewer:

Tania Earnshaw [3]

~~Editor's Choice:~~

off

Media type:

Book

BfK Rating:

2

Morpurgo has joined forces with Jane Feather, a former poetry editor and now CEO of Farms for City Children (the charity set up by the Morpurgos to give urban children access to and a love of the countryside), to edit this book in the lofty hope that it will make the countryside 'feel more like home' to urban children. The cover talks of a collection 'of poetry ancient and modern' yet it feels heavily weighted towards the ancient or at least the out of copyright writers. I'm always suspicious when anthologies do this as I suspect that this isn't about exposing young people to the classics but more about avoiding royalty payments. The book is also appallingly sparse on women writers. I kept waiting to see Matthew Sweeney's cows appear but over the page it was yet another 'anon'. The book is a useful collection on the topic, includes some great poems and is well illustrated by Quentin Blake, but I'd find it hard to get a child to read this, let alone use it to inspire them to explore the countryside.

Running Order:

10

Source URL (retrieved on Feb '21): <http://booksforkeeps.co.uk/issue/154/childrens-books/reviews/cock-crow-poems-about-life-in-the-countryside>

Links:

[1] <http://booksforkeeps.co.uk/childrens-books/cock-crow-poems-about-life-in-the-countryside>

[2] <http://booksforkeeps.co.uk/issue/154>

[3] <http://booksforkeeps.co.uk/member/tania-earnshaw>