Two super new stories in one paperback from a writer with a timeless sense of fun and an eye and ear for the humour that lies in the incongruous. The indefatigable inventor here produces a car that can be deflated and put in pockets, so solving the parking problems in Great Pagwell! The second story involves the community with a clever automatic writing machine. Hunter's writing is as fresh as ever: he knows how to involve young readers and carry them along. Gerald Rose's pictures (sometimes whole pages) do more than just "illustrate": they are a part of the zany reading experience, Splendid.
