A lovely story about a basset hound dealing with a cat who considers herself to be a very superior feline and is particularly obnoxious as the limelight of motherhood rests upon her. Baxter's experiences as he copes with the situation and eventually becomes honorary father is superbly depicted in text and illustration. The sadness the experiences as the kittens go to new homes is sensitively drawn and the end is satisfying to one and all. A really good book: it doesn't duck the issues, the animals remain true to their likely characteristics and we're left with wry smiles on our faces.
