'Ring, ring, ring' - a call from granddaughter Polly sends Grandad Pot into a frenzy of activity making chocolate cake for tea. But that's not all: the telephone rings again and again as Polly invites Harry, Rosie and George too, each of whom has a favourite dish, and there's a surprise in store when Polly finally does arrive. Whether there's a surprise for readers depends on how well they've read the pictures. This book has everything the learner reader could wish for: natural repetition, a cumulative patterned text and appealing pictures which act as clues as well as extending the story. It begs to be read over and over again.
