My children have been fascinated by this one. The only problem has been that they'd like toys and a house like the one in this book - now - so they too can make the dolls act out the story. This is a lovely retelling of an old favourite. The children were a bit puzzled by the illustration at the beginning of the book being repeated for the end pages. However, they decided it was so the child to whom the toys belonged could make them tell the story again and again and again.
